FUND MANAGER'S REVIEW, OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

In February 2025, United States (U.S.) equity indices declined due to underperformance in major tech stocks, concerns over elevated inflation, and weaker consumer spending. Uncertainty around the Federal Reserve (Fed) policy and signs of a slowing economy, including falling home prices, further weighed on investor sentiment, causing U.S. markets to underperform compared to global equities. European equities rose driven by optimism over a potential ceasefire in Ukraine and strong performance in financial and defence sectors. Asean equities performed mixed with Chinese equities, including those in Hong Kong and Shanghai, performed strongly, fueled by China's pro-growth policies, including fiscal and monetary stimulus, and government measures to stabilize the real estate and capital markets. Additionally, the rise of AI-driven companies like DeepSeek boosted sentiment, particularly in the tech sector.

The Bursa Malaysia index series delivered mixed performance, with the FTSE Bursa Malaysia KLCI (FBM KLCI) recording a modest gain of 1.14%, while other indices posted negative returns. The positive performance of the FBM KLCI was primarily driven by the resilience of large-cap stocks, which outperformed mid- and small-cap indices during the month. However, broader market sentiment was weighed down by cautious foreign investors activity, influenced by concerns over elevated U.S. inflation and the Fed's decision to hold interest rates. Despite Malaysia's strong economic fundamentals i.e. robust Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth and healthy Foreign Direct Investment (FDI), these external headwinds limited the overall performance.

Our dynamic Shariah-compliant equity investment strategy adapts to market volatility by focusing on fundamentally strong companies and actively managing our portfolio based on market trends and economic indicators to optimize returns and mitigate risk.

Note:

Based on the Fund's portfolio returns as at 10 March 2025, the Volatility Factor (VF) for this Fund is 13.2 and is classified as "High".
