FUND MANAGER'S REVIEW

The FBMS Index was down by 1.06% in July as market sentiment continued to be affected by high Covid-19 cases as well as political uncertainty in Malaysia with the sudden withdraw of support by UMNO party towards the Prime Minister. The Fund's performance on the other hand was up by 5.44% during the month and managed to outperform its benchmark by 6.50% as the Fund's holdings on technology and Industrial related counters performed better than broader Index linked stocks during the month.

In the near term, the Fund intends to maintain its exposure in the global solar and electric car supply chain to participate in these two fast growing sectors as persistent global chip shortage indicates a strong demand for the rest of 2021 and into 2022. Economy re-opening related counters and e-payment related companies will likely benefit once Malaysia reaches 40% to 60% vaccination rate and more economic activities is being allowed. As such, the fund will continue to place emphasis on this development and maintain its tactical investment position for economy recovery play with the aim of boosting its NAV price performance for 2H of 2021.
