Fund Fact Sheet | JANUARY 2023

FUND MANAGER'S REVIEW

The FBMS Index was up by 1.44% as window dressing activity in the US market had boosted the market performance of Bursa Malaysia in December. The fund's NAV had decreased by 0.04% on 1-month basis and underperformed its benchmark by 1.12% as its holdings in technology and industrial sector stocks did not benefit from the window dressing activity during the month.

On the local front, a more stable Pakatan Harapan-led unity federal government is seen as positive to the country as it should lead to more credible and stable government for Malaysia. Given the possible improving market sentiment on Bursa, the fund will continue to invest in growth stocks to position for potential upside in the medium-term horizon especially once the US Fed interest rate hike exercise nearing its tail end in 2023 towards possible peak of 5% range. The economy re-opening themed investments are also expected to post satisfactory performance in the near term as tourist arrival from China finally returns to Malaysia from 8th January 2023 onwards.
